Coalition Building: A Healthy Community is Everyone's Business (@ $20.00 plus shipping/handling) (Publication #: 24-10284) ... ☐

(All mail orders for this manual must be prepaid by check or money order) This 1996, 168-page manual presents an analytical view of coalitions and what makes them work. It describes the stages of coalition building with specific steps, lessons learned, required technical support, and tools to help the coalition builder—a critical component of project development.

Directory of Texas and National Health Promotion Resources (April 2001) (No charge; formerly the Directory of Health Promotion Resource Organizations) (Publication #: 24-10567) ☐

Created in Spring 1993 through a partnership between the Texas Department of Health and Texas Comprehensive School Health Initiative, the latest version of the directory lists resources to assist health educators and health promoters implement health-related programs—includes Texas and national organizations, toll-free numbers, and a listing of national health observances.

Health Promotion Inter-Change newsletter (No charge) (Publication #: 24-10516) I want to subscribe.

Send my newsletter in the following format ☐ Electronic ☐ Hard Copy ☐ Both
A quarterly, four to eight page newsletter that concentrates on some of the main issues and concerns in health promotion as a profession and in community practice. It includes a glimpse of health promotion activities in Texas Public Health Regions and identifies upcoming health-related conferences, workshops, and similar events. A regular article features facts about and opportunities for Certified Health Education Specialists (CHES).

Quality in Health Promotion (No charge; subject to supply availability) (Publication #: 24-10225) ☐

(Future editions may be available on a cost recovery basis only)
Recommended for use by those practicing health promotion or health education in any setting. This 1996, 140-page document includes project and professional standards of excellence in health promotion—presented in outline and checklist formats—and a long-range action plan for achieving quality based on four core functions. Packaged in a three ring binder, the pages can be easily removed for use in planning and/or evaluating projects and professional practice.
